Darren Breakhaus loves living and working in Raleigh, North Carolina. His partner on their morning radio show, Susan Wyndham, doesn't hate Raleigh -- she just always saw herself reaching a bigger audience. So, when a New York City radio station makes an unsolicited offer to "Break 'n' Wynd," it's a blessing and a curse -- especially since Darren and Susan are about to get married. Even though Darren would like to, he can't say "no" to Susan; and, the two pack up everything and move to New York -- postponing the wedding and leaving everything they know -- as they uncover a strange new world. Along the way, they discover a tough female GM, a greasy consultant, a crazy CEO, the importance of old friends, the fun of new ones and, eventually the devious business reasons that led to their New York gig. Can two disc jockeys from the South find a way to get their lives back under control -- and finally say "I do?" Thanks to a great twist at the end, the answer is: YES.
