Dave and Terry are two guys with one dream: to become the most popular morning radio team in America. Problem is, they're in Davenport, Iowa. And, when the next "big job" offer comes. It's in Spokane, Washington. On top of that, Dave's live-in girlfriend, Nancy is also the newsperson on their show. Is she supposed to let go of her career hopes to follow him? It's not a smooth ride, but all three arrive in Spokane where they meet and deal with the oddballs who populate the city's radio scene. Soon, Nancy has a new radio news job - across town - and, Terry finds romance with Lisa, the oh-so-hot newswoman at their new Spokane station. But the status quo doesn't last. Thanks to the station consultant, the boys get a better job in Reno. But, this time, Nancy stays behind; and Lisa makes the same decision Nancy made only a few months before. In Reno, Dave is miserable, missing Nancy. Lisa is miserable, missing her job -- and Terry is talking about leaving the team to take a job with the consultant who got them into this mess. It couldn't get much worse -- but, it does when a tear-stained Lisa shows up late one night at Dave's apartment. Based on real life events, "Life in the Air" finds a way to weave the frayed ends of broken dreams together for a warm and satisfying conclusion.
